- 87 DICKENS (Charles) Letter, signed, with the date in words, and the name of Mrs. Winter in his autograph, 1 p. 8vo, Gad's Hill Place, Higham by Rochester, Kent, 14 June, 1865, to Mrs. Winter

* * A VALUABLE LETTER, REFERRING TO THE TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT STAPLEHURST: "... This is not all in my own hand, because I am too much shaken to write many notes. Not by the heating and dragging of the carriage in which I was—it did not go over, but was caught on the turn among the ruin of the bridge—but by the work afterwards to get out the dying and dead, which was terrible." The importance of this letter can be judged when it is seen that it refers to the terrible railway accident at Staplehurst, in which many were killed and many suffered horribly, and which was very near being the death-blow to Dickens. The reference to this accident in the "Dictionary of National Biography" is: "On 9 June, 1865, he (Dickens) was in a terrible railway accident at Staplehurst. The carriage in which he travelled left the line, but did not, with others, fall over the viaduct. The shock to his nerves was great and permanent, and he exerted himself excessively to help the sufferers." The above letter was written but five days after the accident.

* * * This excessively rare volume of Elizabethan verse is dedicated to William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke (Shakespeare's patron). It was the first publication of John Davies of Hereford. There was no copy in the Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica (although no less than ten of this author's works were included in that famous collection), nor in the Huth library.

It is quoted by Halliwell-Phillipps in his Memorials on Hamlet; also in Furnivall's Allusions to Shakespeare, &c.

- 137 Denmark. THE KING OF DENMARKE'S WELCOME, containing his ariuall, abode and entertainment, both in the Citie and other places, sewn Edward Allde, 1606

* * * Extremely scarce. Describes the entertainments and shows given in honour of the King's visit, including the songs, &c. At p. 16 a play is mentioned as being acted before the King of Denmark called "Abuses" containing both a Comedie and a Tragedie, this piece was produced, according to Hazlitt, under the direction of John Heminge, the old friend and fellow actor of Shakespeare, and one of the editors of the 'First Folio.' It is therefore by no means unlikely that Shakespeare was present, or gave some assistance in these representations. The King of Denmark must have been a personage of much interest to Shakespeare about this period as his Hamlet had been first published only three years previously, and other editions followed in 1604 and 1605.

Son état m'inquiète et me fait peine; car vous scaver qu'en admirant son grand talent, nous l'aimons pour lui." 197 THE ORDER OF THE GARTER. ENGLISH HERALDIC MANUSCRIPT PROBABLY OF THE LATTER END OF THE 15TH AND EARLY PART OF THE 16TH CENTURIES (c. 1490-1515?), COMPRISING 197 COLOURED COATS OF ARMS AND 91 BADGES OF THE EARLIEST KNIGHTS OF THE GARTER, WITH NAMES, TITLES AND BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES ATTACHED, 34 leaves vellum, size 17 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 13 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. bound in ruby velvet with inside linings and fly-leaves of silk

* * * This very important historical Manuscript contains the Arms of most of the installed Knights of the Garter from the first institution of the Order in the time of Edward III, down to the commencement of the reign of Henry VIII. The entries are arranged in the order of succession of the Knights to the Stalls of the original founders. Although the Stalls are not numbered, in a great measure the names corresponding in sequence (with a few omissions) with those set down in the lost Windsor Tables recorded by Ashmole, and from him quoted by later authorities. Sufficient differences exist to show that the Windsor Tables and this Manuscript were derived from independent sources, but they complement and supplement each other in a remarkable manner, especially with regard to the vexed question of the translation of Knights from one Stall to another. In the Windsor Tables, as is also the case in nearly all existing records of the Order, the names and titles are given in French, but the fact that they, together with the biographical notes, are here in English, adds greatly to the interest and importance of the present Manuscript. It brings the record down a little later than the Windsor Tables for there are twenty-five additional later entries, while on the other hand the Tables include ten late entries not comprised in the Manuscript.

The Arms are drawn and coloured by Artists of no mean ability. In general each averages about five inches in height, and they are usually set out three on a page down the centre, although many of the later entries are crowded into the margin. Ninety-one of the Arms have the holders' Badges annexed in the left-hand margin, which greatly increases the heraldic interest of the volume. Against each Arms is neatly written in the right-hand margin, the name of the Knight, followed in the majority of cases with a note on his family, some main incidents in his career, or the place of his burial. In many instances these notes are of considerable extent, several in fact comprising upwards of one hundred and fifty words.

The Manuscript was evidently not all executed at quite the same date, but appears to have been in progress for perhaps twenty-five years, say approximately from 1490 to 1515. The bulk of it, judging from its arrangement was done from about 1490 to 1500, for the majority of the entries of Knights elected after the latter date, are crowded into the margin, because in many places no room had been left for subsequent entries in the usual position down the centre of each page. The handwriting of the notes is probably the same throughout, though considerable variation exists, as might be expected in a work extending over so long a period of years. But it is highly probable that the scribe was not also the draughtsman, for there is ample evidence that at least two artists worked on the Arms, for the later ones are quite distinct in character and colouring from the earlier ones, as pointed out in detail below.

The approximate date is clearly arrived at from the inscription attached to the Arms of King Henry VII on the recto of folio 2.

"And nowe gloriously reigneth oure condigne lorde Kinge Henr the VIIth whiche in his youth hath endured many greate duresse And blessed by God hath wonne ii greate Batailles the ffyrste the Bataile of Redmore where was sleyne the seyde king Richard the thyrde and the duc of Northfolke the Lord fferrys wt many other. The secunde the Bataile of Stoke where was sleyne therle of Lincoln and theyre pretended King taken whiche was but a poore man's sonne."

The battle of Stoke took place in 1487 and as no later event in the career of Henry VII is referred to, the years 1490 to 1500 may reasonably be assumed as the probable time of the writing of the main part of the Manuscript, especially as those dates pretty nearly correspond with the dates of election of the Knights mentioned in the latest primary entries under each Stall all through the volume.

The Arms of King Henry VIII, which follow those of Henry VII, on folio 2, were evidently inserted in the later or second period covered by the Manuscript. They are undoubtedly the work of a different artist for the mantling is of a different character, and whereas in all the eight previous Royal Arms the garters overlap each other and also overlap the Badges, in the case of Henry VIII the garters do not overlap and the border line of the Badge is quite intact. The colour of the garter too is quite different and the motto which had previously read Hony soit quy male y pense is now spelled Hony soyt quy mal y pense. The ornamentations in the garter between each word and also the shape of the buckle and tab are quite distinct in character from the previous eight cases. These Arms of Henry VIII have no name or legend attached but there is one set against this Arms in Stall III. (folio 6) when he was Duke of York and afterwards Prince Henry. Reference is there made to his having afterwards become King and "conquered the cities of terwen and torney with their appurtenances A° 1513." This appears to be the latest event recorded in the whole Manuscript and is the only instance in which a date is actually set down in plain figures.

On folio 4 two entries relating to the gowns of John King of Portugal and Maximilian King of Romans bear the initials Jo. W.R., and another later entry on the same page relating to Philip King of Castile ends with the initials Th. W.R. These initials are undoubtedly those of Sir John Wriothesley who was Garter King of Arms from 1478 to 1504 and of his son Sir Thomas Wriothesley who succeeded him in 1504-5. The known dates of the election of John King of Portugal and of Maximilian, correspond with the dates of Sir John Wriothesley, while the installation of Philip of Castile in 1506 falls within the administration of Sir Thomas. From these entries and in fact from the internal evidence of the Manuscript generally, there can be little doubt that the main part of it was compiled by or under the direction of the elder Wriothesley, and the later entries made in the time of his son Sir Thomas. This supposition is greatly strengthened by the above quoted entry relating to Henry VIII "who conquered the cities of terwen and torney with their appurtenances 1513" for it is mentioned in history that Sir Thomas Wriothesley as Garter King of Arms officiated at the jousts held at Tournay in that year. Consequently the taking of Tournay would be just such an event as would be likely to be recorded in an entry made probably just after his return. The absence of reference to any of the later stirring events in the reign of Henry VIII appears to indicate that this entry was contemporary.

In most of the later entries of Knights elected between 1503 and 1510 the Arms are evidently drawn and coloured by a different artist from the one who executed the main part of the work. An examination of a few of these entries will make this clearly apparent. Take for instance, on folio 2, the aforesaid Arms of Henry VIII, on folio 4, those of Maximilian and Philip of Castile, folio 6, Duke of York, folio 6 verso Marquess of Dorset (the one on the right), folio 8 verso Sir Reynolde Bray and Richard Erle of Kent, folio 13 Edward Lord Dudeley, folio 17 Sir Henry Marny, folio 21 verso Guido Ubaldus, folio 28 verso.

Sir Richard Guildford and Sir Thomas Brandon, folio 34 Lord Lawarre, and many others. If we compare these Arms with those in the main work it is immediately evident that they are the work of another artist and their position shows them to be later. The colours are much brighter, the mantlings are differently drawn and shaded, and the heraldic devices are of a distinct shape and appearance.

As far as can be ascertained this Manuscript takes rank as one of the earliest and most beautiful extant on the subject. Its great historical and heraldic interest cannot be over estimated, and having regard to the fact that nearly all known records of the Order of the Garter are preserved in official custody or in libraries, the appearance of such a manuscript, as the present, in the open market, must necessarily be of the very rarest occurrence. The excellent sound condition of the volume throughout leaves nothing to be desired in that respect.

205 LEICESTER (Robert Dudley, Earl of, Queen Elizabeth's favourite) L. s. by the Earl (as Governor of the States General), countersigned and attested by THOMAS CHURCHYARD (the famous Elizabethan poet), dated from Utrecht, July 9th, 1586

* * * A splendid letter in faultless preservation and bearing a brilliant impression of the great Earl's private seal. The autograph of Leicester's Secretary, Thomas Churchyard, the Elizabethan poet, is excessively rare, so rare indeed that no other example can be traced as occurring for sale. In 1585 Leicester obtained the command of English troops in the Low Countries, though his appointment only served to bring out his incapacity to fill a responsible position. On his arrival at Flushing, Leicester was offered, and accepted, the post of governor by the States, a fact which again provoked the anger of Elizabeth, who declared that the Earl and the States had treated her with contempt. Before Leicester returned to England, towards the end of 1586, he had managed, "with conspicuous incapacity," to throw everything into confusion, and to bring the Low Countries to the verge of ruin. Notwithstanding this, the States again offered him the government, and he went back with supplies of men and money in 1587, though he only retained his post a few months. It has been stated that Shakespeare was under Leicester's command at this period, having (after the poaching episode of 1585) joined the band of Warwickshire youths which served under Leicester in the Low Countries (see Mr. Sidney Lee's "Life of Shakespeare," pp. 26 and 27).

Stockwood, in this remarkable Sermon, devotes no less than three pages (commencing on folio 24) to a denunciation "against Plaies and other vaine exercise on the Lordes day." Malone, Payne-Collier and Halliwell-Phillipps (Outlines of the Life of Shakespeare) give considerable attention to another sermon by the same author, but the present seems to have escaped all of them, and to be totally unknown and undescribed. - 448 Steevens (George) Shakespearean Commentator, A. L. s. 3 pp. Hampstead Heath, 11 Jan. 1788, to Bishop Percy of Dromore, refers to Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery, to Malone's Shakespeare, &c.

I should be inclined to follow Lord Charlemont's advice with much readiness and gratitude ; but our Painters are too self-sufficient to avail themselves of any hint or instruction I could afford them on the subject of Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery. All dresses which are not in modern use, they conceive to be ancient ; or, to express myself more clearly, provided they clothe their characters in such habiliments as were never seen in England (or perhaps anywhere else), they suppose they shall escape censure on the score of anachronism or impropriety. As to the Head you do me the honour to mention, I hardly suppose such a thing can ever be wanted ; for so far from expecting to bring the work to a conclusion, I may not live to see even its beginning. In short the proprietors by no means exert themselves with a degree of zeal proportionable to the encouragement they have received. Of any advances toward the production of this book, except a picture or two painted for it, I am entirely unconscious, nor have I heard a syllable further on the score of paper or typography. It may be supposed that the remonstrances of the Public will, ere long, awaken Messieurs Boydell into more active measures. I believe within a few months you may expect the appearance of Mr. Malone's Shakespeare. I have been told that Mr. Colman also threatens us with a new edition of the same Author. I say threatens, because his publication will prove sufficiently hostile to those of his predecessors. Refers to Spenser's "Faerie Queene." The character your Lordship gives of Mr. Monk Mason's production is thoroughly just. He is often ingenious and sometimes right ; but occasionally outdoes even Dr. Warburton in absurdity of conjecture. There is also somewhat of ferocity in his manner which had better been avoided. Still, with all his extravagance I must allow that he is a man of thinking and erudition. Mentions Boswell's Johnson which is not yet in the press as he (Boswell) awaits the publication of Mrs. Piozzi's correspondence with Johnson. Boswell has been appointed recorder of Carlisle. The three concluding volumes of Gibbon's "Roman History" are expected in about a month. Bruce's "Abyssinian Tour" is also at press. Mentions Oliver Goldsmith and Ritson who "got drunk and assaulted an inoffensive barber," and who has had to pay severely for his frolic. Also refers to Nollekens' bust of Dr. Johnson, &c.

C. probably meant for Richard Carew, the first translator of Tasso into English. Beloe, in his "Anecdotes of Literature and Scarce Books" (vol. Mr. John Skinner at Leinshart, Peterhead, 4 pages quarto, a small portion of three words missing and very slightly defective in the margin owing to the seal, AN IMPORTANT AND MOST INTERESTING LETTER, referring principally to Johnson's "Musical Museum" then in course of compilation. "I regret—and while I live shall regret --that when I was in the North I had not the pleasure of paying a younger brother's dutiful respect to the author of the best Scotch song ever Scotland saw, 'Tullochgorum's my delight.' There is a certain something in the old Scotch songs, a wild happiness of thought and expression, which peculiarly marks them, not only from English songs, but also the modern efforts of song-wrights in our native manner and language :—Our true Brother Ross at Lochlee was likewise 'ow're cannie,' a wild 'warlock,' but now he sings among 'The Sons of the morning' . . . There is a work going on in Edinburgh just now which claims your best assistance. An engraver in this town has set about collecting and publishing all the Scotch songs with the music, that can be found. Songs in the English language, if by Scotchmen, are admitted, but the music must be all Scotch . . . I have been absolutely crazed about it." (This letter was given by the Rev. John Skinner, the person to whom it is addressed, to the grandfather of the present owner.)

923 WHITWORTH PAPERS. THE OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF CHARLES LORD WHITWORTH WITH MINISTERS AND OTHERS. And Letters, Credentials, Despatches, Decrees, Drafts of Treaties and other Documents addressed to him, together with Printed Papers and Pamphlets, Proclamations, Views, Drawings of Arms and Military Operations, etc. etc. collected during his Diplomatic Missions at Ratisbon (1701-5), Vienna (1704), Moscow (1704-11), Ratisbon and Berlin (1714-17), The Hague (1717-19), London (1719), Berlin (1719-22), Hanover (1720), Cambray (1722-4), Paris (1725). A MOST VALUABLE AND EXTENSIVE COLLECTION, consisting of many thousands of papers, some containing Matter of the highest Historical Importance, bound in 41 thick folio volumes

The Letters and Despatches from him are for the most part the original Drafts, often in his own handwriting, in many cases being written out in extenso, while the despatched communications were in cypher. The Letters, etc. addressed to him are as a rule THE ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS, and when copies, have his endorsements, notes, and other emendations.

The Holograph and Signed Letters include those from George I, Caroline Princess of Wales, George Stepney (the poet and diplomatist and Lord Whitworth's political tutor), the Earl of Nottingham (Secretary of State 1702-4), Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, Robert Harley afterwards Earl of Oxford, Erasmus Lewis (the friend of Swift and Pope), Hy. Boyle afterwards Lord Carleton, C. Spencer Earl of Sunderland,

Horatio 1st Lord Walpole, Spanheim the German Diplomatist, the Duke of Queensbury, St. John Viscount Bolingbroke, William Bromley (Secretary of State), Charles Viscount Townshend, James Earl Stanhope, Viscount Cobham, T. Wentworth Earl of Strafford, Count Bothmer (the favourite of George I.), William Earl Cadogan, Count Poniatowski, John Earl of Stair, James Craggs (Secretary of State), Count Birnsdorff, Baron Goertz, Count Hattorf, Lord Glenorchy, Sophia Dorothea Queen of Prussia, Lord Cartaret, Lord Polwarth (afterwards Earl Marchmont), Count Rottembourg, and numerous others.

The Russian Section in 8 vol. is particularly rich, and from the materials there collected Lord Whitworth doubtless compiled his "Account of Russia as it was in 1710," printed by Walpole at Strawberry Hill in 1758. The year 1715 is of great interest, showing the efforts made by the Ambassador to counteract the machinations of the Pretender's agents on the Continent.

the Duc de Berri. His coat of arms is emblazoned on each of the illuminated pages. The paintings are interesting, one representing David seated, playing on a peal of bells; in the bottom margin two archers shooting at a mark. The border is ended by two grotesques, one playing a violin with a double bow, the other apparently reading a horn book. The initial miniature of the second of the decorated pages is a highly finished representation of the Trinity; in the bottom margin a wild boar running on a spear held by a kneeling man behind a tree. The ends of the borders are two angels, each swinging a censer. Author with a view to plagiarism, a not unusual thing with Greene, Marston, Webster, and their contemporaries, as is being shown by Mr. Chas. Crawford week by week in his articles in Notes and Queries on the "Three Grand Elizabethan Plagiarists." Mr. Sidney Lee has seen this MS. and there are two interesting Letters of his concerning it inserted. It has been daringly suggested that Shakespeare may have had a hand in the Writing — a suggestion neither provable nor unprovable. Greene is supposed to have had a hand with Shakespeare in the production of the play of Edward III.
